JUNE 14, 1878. The interest attaching to the commence ment exercises of the public schools culminated in the public meeting held last night at Library Hall to attend the address of Rev. S. A. Steel, of Richmond. (Mr. Steel married in Petersburg, so he is also considered a citizen of our enterprising town.) There audience that the speaker remarked at the beginning of his address that he had never been so honored in that respect except on one previous occasion of his life. His remarks were practical, entertaining, and eloquent, and afforded great satisfaction. After by the president of the Association the its close, the city superintendent, Mr. R. E. Hardaway, gave a sketch of the history and character of the High-School. The distribution of distinctions, &c., concluded the with them.

entertainment. As a recognition of the merits and a recommendation of the most faithful teachers, and those who have been longest employed, the superintendent to-day issued to a number of them certificates exempting them from examination for five years. The selection of teachers is made, of course, by the School Board, but these certificates at least do the applicant for reappointment, and, other things being equal, ought to secure him the preference. This being the season of the election of Masonic officials, Mr. William B. McIlwaine has been chosen W. M. of Powhatan Starke Lodge. The colored lodges have elected as follows: Friendly Lodge, No. 21, James M. Stokes, W. M.; Sheba Lodge, Robert Crump, W. M.

Rev. Dr. T. D. Witherspoon, pastor of the of the most learned divines of the State, is to preach on next Sunday morning a sermon on "Infant Baptism." As there has lately been some little feeling on the subect growing out of its discussion in and out of the city pu!pit it is announced that Dr. Witherspoon's argument is intended primarily for the members of his own communion, and is delivered without reference to any other sermon on the same theme. The public is, however, politely invited to Hard times prevail over here to that ex tent that not one of our citizens has departed for Europe, and only two families have gone to the springs. One of these gentlemen keeps a spring himself, so that his going is not to be set to the score of dissipation. A pic-nic party, fifty-odd strong, propos to spend to-morrow at the snuff mills, a mile or two west of the city. It is under the auspices of Mrs. Morrison, Mrs. Meade, Mrs. Dunlap, and other ladies. A new roof is being added to Centre warehouse, and other improvements made in its interior arrangement. There is some demand to have both the market-houses open every day instead of on alternate days, as at present. The opposition to the move comes from the people oing business around Centre Market, who claim that if both were opened daily all the sellers and buyers would gradually desert to the older place.

Judge Farrar is to deliver two lectures here on the 20th and 21st instant for the benefit of Wesley chapel (Methodist). It will be a great triumph of the Judge's popularity as satisfactory audiences, as Dr. jurry, Dr. Hoge, and the late Dr. Dunean of late years have failed to draw out large udiences to lectures in Petersburg. It is said that before the war even Thackeray didn't make enough here to pay his expenses; and a good story is told thereanent which will keep for some other time. FORIN ADAIR.

MEMORIAL-DAY-FINE DISPLAY OF MILITARY-A PROFUSION OF DECORATIONS-DISAPPOINT-MENT AT THE NON-ARRIVAL OF THE HOWIT-ZERS AND COMPANY B.

[Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.] STAUNTON, June 14, 1878. No event which has occurred in Staunton has occasioned such a display of military, such crowds of visitors, and such profusion of decerations as the observance of Decoration-day, which is now progressing. Looking westward from what is called "Gospel Hill," on Main street, that avenue is one long succession of evergreen arches, national and State flags, decoration banners, at which Main and New streets intersect there are pillars of evergreen connected by festoons, from which hang medallions beaving inscriptions in honor of the dead and in welcome of our visitors. At the next corner, where Augusta street intersects Main, there is another single arch. Still further up, at the Lutheranchurch corner, is a splendid arch, and yet another one higher up the street and in front of the residence of Mayor Balthis. All these bore suitable inscriptions, and several bear portraits of Lee and Jackson. The business portion of Main street is flooded with national and State flags, and banners and streamers of all sizes but of similar hues-red, white, and blue-except here and there a building is decorated in mourning colors of black and white. The business portions of two other principal streets-Augusta and New-also are alive with decorations, which may also be said of the larger portion of the lower part of the city. As late as 2 o'clock this morning citizens were engaged in manufacturing flags and ban-Before dawn this morning the city was astir. The people from the country had already commenced arriving in vehicles. The city military, West Augusta Guards, Captain W. L. Bumgarder, and the Staunton Artillery, Captain Alex. H. Fultz, were already in line to receive the military visitors who came by the early trains. Much disappointment was felt at finding, on the arrival of the Richmond train, that neither Company B nor the Howitzers had come; but the detachment that represented the First Virginia regiment, though only numbering a squad, were a soldierly and agreeable set of men, and were heartily welcome. They were quartered at the Virginia Hotel, is also was the Lynchburg Artillery Blues, Captain F. T. Lee, a fine-looking company of cannoneers, who do not wear the State uniform, but blue with red trimming. The Danville Grays, under Captain A. Gerst, who arrived on the same train, were quartered at the American Hotel. After two excursion trains with citizens had arrived over the Valley railroad the military train came in sight. It contained the Harrisonburg Guard, the Anderson Guard of Woodstock, and the Winchester Light Infantry, all uniformed in the State gray, and presenting, as they marched up to Grange Hall, a fine appearance. This hall, where the visiting military was first taken before being marched to quarters, was very handsomely fitted up. Over the stage, on which was a howitzer with ammunition piled near, and stacked muskets, were hung festoons, n which were portraits of Lee, Jackson, and Breckinridge draped in mourning. Around on the walls were H. R. Stevens: wreaths of evergreen containing the monograms in flowers of the companies and bands expected, and it was not agreeable lo see the Howitzer monogram not used. Under the ball is the Stonewall Brigade Band room—a handsomely furnished apartment, handsomely decorated, and adjoined by a refectory, in which refreshments were prepared for the visiting bands-they being the Harrisonburg, Shepherdstown, Charlestown, Woodstock, and Strasburg bands.

The military led, followed by the Augusta Engine Company, and or Captain M. C. Engine Company, under Captain M. Cox, with hose-carriages beautifully decorated with flowers; the book-and-ladder truck, under Captain J. M. Hardy, also decorated, with evergreens and mourning drapery, with two little girls dressed in white sitting on top; and finally the carriages containing the clergy, Rev. Dr. Charles Manly and Rev. James E. Booker; the orator of the day, Captain Henry L. Hoover; Mr. John Merritt, a veteran of the war of 1812: Colonel James H. Skinner, president of the Memorial Association; General John Echols, Judge William McLaughlin, and others. The whole procession was under the direction of Captain James Bumgard ner, Jr., chief marshal, and was admirably managed. After going through the princi pal streets it entered the cemetery through gate over which a high arch of evergreens had been erected. On reaching the sol dlers' burial section the military filed off into the different sections, and a lady arrayed in white, accompanied by two youths bear ing baskets of bouquets, walked into each section and scattered the flowers, the bands playing a dirge in the mean time. There were six ladies. I think, engaged in this floral tribute, and the sight was very pretty. At was in attendance so large and brilliant an its close the people crowded in and scattered flowers. The Association placed four hundred wreaths and four hundred bouquets on the graves. The address of Captain Henry L. > AN EQUALIZATION OF THE PAY OF HOUSE AND SENATE EMPLOYEES. Mr. Atkins, of Tennessee, chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, stated that the joint conference committee of the Senate and House had substantially agreed to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill, with the exception of that part which related to the pay of the employés of the two houses. The House committee contended that the pay fixed for the Senate employes were entitled to no more pay than those of the House. They had agreed that the Senate should have a page to four senators, while the House only | day to sign bills. has a page to eleven representatives, and that they had yielded to the Senate's of the House. The Senate committee, however, contended that they would not reduce the pay of the Senate's employes. Mr. Foster (Republican), of the House committee, said that while senators are old and infirm, and needed more waiting on than representatives, those who served them ought not to have more pay than House employés. Messrs. Frye, Chalmers, Franklin, and Beebe wanted the Senate to fix the pay of its employes. The House agreed to a new conference committee. The amount in controversy is about $28,000, and the enrolling clerk of the House, for example, who does a great deal more work than the same officer in the Senate, gets $500 per annum less than the Senate pays its enrolling clerk. The other Senate officers are as much better paid in proportion.

AMINIDAB BURCHARD SETS A TRAP FOR DEMO-

CRAIS. Mr. Burchard, of Illinois, whose conduct in regard to the tobacco tax has been most discreditable, offered a resolution that Haves and Wheeler, having been declared President and Vice-President by the last Congress, any effort to disturb them in the system, invigorating and strengthening the system | occupancy of their respective seats by any future Congress would be revolutionary. The Republicans chuckled over the trick, because they thought the Democrats would refuse to swallow the word "revolutionary," and it would go out to the country that they were for removing Hayes if the evidence before the Potter committee shall furnish a pretext for it. They were wofully disappointed, however, when the resolution was adopted-ayes, 215; noes, 21. Mr. Pridemore was the only Virginia member who voted "No."

FIRST MEETING OF THE PLENIPOTENTIARIES. BERLIN, June 14 .- An hour before the meeting of the congress yesterday a crowd assembled on Wilhelm strasse to see the plenipotentiaries alight. The first to arrive were the Italian ambassadors, Count Corti and Count Delaunay, in grand uniforms covered with gold-lace and embroidery. They were followed by Count Andrassy, The Senate amendments to the river and dressed as a honored hussar, and Count Karoly, conspicuous in the furred coat peculiar to a Hungarian magnate. Then The post-route bill was sent back to the came, attired in official garb. Prince Gortschakoff and Prince DeOubril, General Hevmerle, Count Schouvaloff, M. Hayes and other Powers were seated in the following order: Austria on the right of Prince Bis-President and Vice-President, and declar- marck; beside Austria came England; next to England, Russia. On the left of the president were France, Italy, and Turkey. Opposite the president were Prince Hobenlohe and Count Von Balow, with Herr Radowitz, as secretary, on a small chair between them.

After the introduction of the Secretaries Prince Bismarck solicited secrecy for the deliberation, and the members agreed, but no promise or oath was demanded. It is probable this question will be settled later, or each member judge for himself what he shall say or do. The injuncion of secrecy may mean no more than that each member wish to communicate, and also those to any such power be exercised by the courts | whom he will give them. In any case the public should be guarded. The difficulty of obtaining information will give birth to broad and baseless rumors.

Lord Beaconstield is the centre of attraction. His personal qualities, past career, and recent successes equally command the interest of the public.

The agreement reserves to Russia and England the right to raise and discuss in the congress all questions not included in its stipulations. But if, after the discussion, Russia persists in maintaining the treaty as modified by this agreement England will not dispute her right to do so.
